

SEEN, HEARD AND TOLD

BY THE EDITOR

We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.—Acts 4:2

Mrs. F. B. Scott of Holcomb was the first to recognize the farm picture last week, while James Jacks at the post office was the next one, but Cecil Jacks, owner, either did not recognize his own property, or has not come to claim the mounted photograph. Such information as we received either came from Volney Nason, grandson of Robert Beard, or from Cecil's brother, James, here in Grenada.

Pre-viewer Bob Sartwell SAYS he knows whose place is pictured today, but the owner will have to come in, or send in for the picture.

On pages 2 and 3 of this issue, we are reproducing A Century of Reminiscences, a fine story of a century in Grenada County related by the late Mr. William M. Dubard to one of his grandsons, William A. Lomax. This article is well-worth of space in the scrap book of anyone.

The Dubard are anything but unappreciative, as we have heard by phone, letter or personally how much they appreciated what they described as a "fine" write-up of the family published week before last.

After meeting and talking again with Carroll Gartin, here this week, I am very much less inclined to say anything ill of him, but continue to say, as I have said all along, he is a fine young man and a worthy opponent of Jim Eastland, currently serving well in the U. S. Senate. I just think that Jim's "age" in the Senate is a very valuable asset for Mississippians, an asset which should not be disregarded for any sentimental reasons.

Grover Lott, budding merchant prince from the Gold Coast, was monkeying around in Grenada Tuesday.

Fisherman-Jeweler Daves and wife have been on a fine 2-weeks' vacation, fishing and frolicking. What T. Darras says about him should not be printed.

This young lawyer, Fred M. Bush of Holly Springs, seems to be a very fine young man and one who is ambitious, as young men should be, to get ahead in his professional life. I have yet to hear him say an ill word about his distinguished opponent, Judge Herbert Holmes of Senatobia. About all that could be said against Judge Holmes is an honorable, but inescapable thing - that he is old and getting older.

Fred Simmons has blossomed out in a new Cadillac. Fred's former main man, Shag Trussell, seems to be getting on OK.

J. M. Webb is just about starting on his retirement period. He has been to see us every week for about 8 years and, while we will miss him, we express the hope that retirement will mean to him all of the fine things he has worked for all of these years.

It looks like the marrying bug has struck the Eddie Davis family. First thing one knows, Eddie went home so many pretty SINGLE gals, all of them will be pretty MARRIED gals.

Tommie Darras says that, the way Louie Friedman makes him paddle away from the landing, Louie's outboard motor takes as much water as the Queen Mary. The three of us again went to fishing at Enid Sunday afternoon. Tommie did not brag AS much this time.

Sam Wade was at Enid Sunday and it looked like he was instructing his doctor friend.

Three prominent Jewish fishermen, Dattel, Cohen and Isenberg seemed to have hooked a nice mess of fish Sunday.

Items From Oxberry: Dot Hayden has about the prettiest soyas beans I have seen, on the air base old property. Mr. Deloach has two bulldozers cleaning up virgin land north of Black Hawk Lake. John Boyd is pressing on toward Oxberry with his blacktopping job. It won't be long until we can ride from Grenada to Oxberry on blacktop. John Boyd and his crew don't monkey around, but work hard and regularly. Dan Carter seems to have his small crop in good shape, as usual. Since she got some more codliver oil and oranges, Maria Davis' arthritis is getting better.

Political reminiscences: In the last gubernatorial race both Jimmie Arrington and Carroll Gartin were candidates for lieutenant governor. Both spoke at Winona. Both attracted a good many young women to hear them. One young lady said she was going to vote for Jimmie Arrington because Jimmie was so funny. The other young lady said she was going to vote for Carroll Gartin because of Carroll's eyes. A lotta folks this year are going to vote for Carroll because they don't want Paul Johnson to have to worry with Carroll in the Governor's race in 1966.

I'm no doctor and I ain't bragging, but I do know that a simple remedy has helped my arthritis SO FAR. I take a tablespoon of codliver oil and the juice of one orange every night. I got this remedy from Mrs. Jake Whitaker and have passed it on to other sufferers. It don't hurt you and, it may help you as it has done me and others.

I heard that Jim Eastland, whose car is being driven by Brad Dye, Jr., was in Grenada Monday, but I did not see him, but, for that matter, I have not seen him face to face in 12 or more years.

ATTENTION VETERANS—

All eligible veterans interested in attending a GI Training School in Grenada offering courses in Building and Grounds Maintenance are urged to get in touch with William Winter, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, as soon as possible. Separate classes will be held for white and colored veterans.

The school, which will be operated under the supervision and direction of the State Department of Vocational Education, will offer full subsistence benefits to qualified veterans. Officials pointed out that classes will be held in so far as possible so as not to conflict with the regular employment of the students.

The establishment of the school depends on having sufficient applications from veterans. Everyone who is interested in attending the school is urged to give his name to Mr. Winter within the next few days.

Hayward Case Taken 'Under Advisement'

In a case in which Will Hayward, represented by William A. Lomax, is suing Grenada County for damages alleged to have occurred because of diversion of waters from their natural course in the Riverdale section of Beat 4, Judge Holmes, serving as a sort of arbiter in the case, has postponed decision until he studies the record further. This case was heard in the chancellor's chambers in Grenada Monday.

Carroll Gartin Is Guest Of Rotary Club

The Rotary Club was honored Monday by Lt. Governor

Carroll Gartin who delivered the principal address at the usual Rotary Luncheon Program.

Mississippi's capable young Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin was guest of the Grenada Rotary Club here in Grenada on last Monday.

Lt. Gov. Gartin was introduced by Billy Semmes, Representative from Grenada and Montgomery, Columbia, and a co-worker in the Mississippi Legislature with Mr. Gartin. Mr. Semmes described Gartin as another example of Mississippi's contribution to the fine young leadership of the Nation and praised the Lt. Governor's leadership in the recent sessions of the Legislature.

In keeping with Rotary principles the speaker avoided political issues completely, but delivered a forthright address on the recent progress of this state and the great promise for future development of the state's resources, not only industrially but agriculturally as well. The role of agriculture in the state's economy was particularly emphasized by Gartin, who illustrated this point by citing the income from various farm products and the relative importance of agricultural products in the whole of the state's economy.

Gartin praised the cooperation and the splendid legislative service rendered by the Grenada County members of the House of Representatives and reminded that crucial problems lay ahead for the Legislature.

The program was concluded by President Donald Ross delivering his valedictory address and the assumption of the leadership of Rotary in Grenada by Raphael Semmes, Jr. for the coming year.

Brick School Being Built At Holcomb For Negroes

(Mrs. W.W.W.)

A six room and two rest room, brick veneer school building is in process of being constructed just north of Holcomb on three acres of 16th Section land, by General Contractor, McDaniel Brothers of Jonesboro, Ark. and Emmett Barrett of Greenwood who will install plumbing and heating.

The over all cost will be $26,863.70 with the statement that digging of the artesian well and installation of Butane Gas as extra and above the building cost.

Robert Ratliff has completed the digging of the well.

The class rooms measure 33 ft. X 21 ft. The over-all measurements of the building will be 53.2 feet by 119.2 feet, and is so built that should added facilities be needed, they could be added later.

Built of red brick veneer the fire-proof building is finished inside with tile. The floors of concrete and the heaters are to be suspended from the ceiling. The blackboards and coat racks are provided in the initial plans. The contractors asked for 120 days to complete the building, so that is may be ready when school opens in September when 180 pupils are expected to report for registration. Three busses will transport the pupils.

Ernest Key's will be principal and the teachers are to be Velma Bland, Betty Ruth Williams, Willie D. Fields, Norma Wright and Rebecca Reid.

The Grenada County Board of Supervisors after receiving proper approval from the State BAWI committee in Jackson for a Beat One-financed plan, gave official approval to the proposed $1,975,000.00 bond issue to finance the McQuay factory while the County Election Commission named Saturday, July 24th, 1964 as the date when the voters of Beat One will vote upon the issuance of these bonds.

The Grenada County Board of Supervisors is composed of Ben Sanders (President) representing Beat 1; J. W. Bowen, Beat 2; Albert Clark, Beat 3; Lewis Williams, Beat 4; and Barty Fox, Beat 5. The County Election Commission is composed of Bill Lomax, Orley Lilly and Ed Underwood.

This will be the county's first venture into the field of BAWI financing, other such loans in this county having been financed by the City of Grenada, which is 100 per cent Beat One.

The McQuay company has been requested by the Industrial Committee of the Grenada County Chamber of Commerce as a well-organized, financially sound, manufacturing products within the ready-made, in a big market. A representative of the company, Mr. J. H. McQuay, is the head in which the McQuay company hopes to find an outlet for its products.

While the land on which to build the factory has not yet been selected, it is generally believed that part of the Ross lands east of the Plant will be acquired with part of the proceeds of the million-dollar bond issue. Another part of the money will be used to build a factory.

The City of Grenada has already financed several such enterprises and additions of existing plants, notably Grenada Industries, Inc. and Buschman Glass Company.

Beat One has seven voting precincts: four in Grenada itself, one at The Plant one at Elliott and another across Bogue in Fultonsville.

A Century of Reminiscences

By William M. Dubard,
as related to his grandson,
William A. Lomax

Born on November 8, 1847 and writing these memoirs in 1943, it has been my privilege during my life time to witness three great periods or eras in the history of my native Mississippi.

As a child and boy I remember something of the life of the old South before the War Between the States; as a youth I participated briefly in that war and in the succeeding period of Reconstruction—a time when our people had to change from the old to a new form of life; as a matured and then aged man I have witnessed the modern age of invention and great physical development of the country.

My boyhood days were spent on the family plantation, about two miles south of Dubard Station in what is now Grenada County, Mississippi. The old house at home I can see it now. A great rambling house with wide halls and galleries, set back some three hundred yards from the meandering public road leading to Grenada, some eight miles away. Clustered about it is a beautiful grove of hickory and oak where I played and gambled as a child. There is the old fashioned dining room, the pride of Aunt Martha, one of our negro slaves. Under the old house is the big cellar in which is stored away from 400 to 600 bushels of sweet potatoes, while another cellar contains barrels of molasses, sugar, lard and flour. Just north of the old kitchen is the fattening pen for some twenty chickens selected from the drove of several hundred that rove about the grove and not far away is the dairy with jar after jar of milk and butter that Aunt Lucy has put away.

South of the big house and connected by a portico and broad brick walk is a two-room structure known as the "preacher's house," the special home of the circuit rider and other goodly company which come this way. About the yard are shrubbery and fruit trees among them the old fashioned quince and damson plum. Westward is a great hewn log room, some twenty feet square, where the laundering is done, and close by is the "smoke house." Now we stroll across the road to the garden, past the strawberry bed and the raspberry bushes which surround it. Looking over the garden palings we see the orchard containing several acres of splendid fruit trees of various kinds.

Near the garden gate is the carriage and buggy house, while about 200 yards north are the lot, barn and stable. The two splendid grays you see are the carriage and buggy horses, while the two fat beautifully matched mules are Polly and Fan, which my brother-in-law, John and Green ride. That little day black horse is Henry. All of us learned to ride on him and we who are small ride him still. Near the lot is the workshop, and then begin the row of negro cabins, where the slaves live. More remote are the fields which are cultivated in cotton, corn or produce. Generally, we only cultivated the richer lands located along the creeks and branches.

Our home was not the typical plantation house that supposedly symbolizes the south "before the War," with its beautiful drive-way sweeping up to majestic stone columns such as Natchez or Charleston boasted but it was commodious and livable.

My father was of tall and noble frame, possessed of a stern and sober mien and a tender, gentle and loving disposition. I always felt that my father understood, sympathized with and trusted his boy, and that fact was my anchor in the years which tried my early young manhood, years that were so full of difficulties. Whatever I may have accomplished in this life are due to him and his trust in me. My frail sweet mother who was so good to us all; how I regret that I ever lost an opportunity to sweeten and give joy to her life! To her children and servants she was a veritable angel of mercy. Earth was too poor to give her proper reward, but if the pure white soul can attain it, she has found it in the bright beautiful beyond.

Our community was known as Spring Hill and in that period it was a fine and prosperous neighborhood.

In that generation Mississippi possessed several grades of society; the aristocrats and large slave owners; many plain and straightforward people who owned some slaves; illiterate white people who possessed little or nothing and the negro slaves. Only one of our neighbors did not own a slave and slaveownership fixed one's status in the community.

Seven years old and off I went to school. The school house was a one-room log cabin located near the church at Spring Hill, some three miles away. No Uncle Tom in immaculate livery drove us behind a fine team nor did the district provide busses; we walked to and fro each day. I attended three ten months schools and my formal education was over. The teacher was hired for a term and all the surrounding neighbors contributed as each was able toward his salary. He instructed in everything from ABC's to philosophy and made his home with various neighbor families, living a month here and a month there.

Text books long since forgotten except in story and fiction were used. McGuffey's Reader, the Blue Back Speller, and Smith's Grammar were standard in the early grades. Grammar was learned by heart and quoted: "What is a noun"; "a verb must agree"; "the pronoun then should not be used in place of these or those."

The attending scholars were a heterogeneous group. Little tots of five sat side by side with gangling youths of 21. All the students had copy books practicing the writing put at the top of the page by the teacher.

I recall my three teachers. One came from Pennsylvania while another was a Southern man. Best of all I remember Mr. Gilbert from Vermont. He made me think for myself; he was unconcerned about a pupil learning by heart and language of the text book but preferred recitations in one's own words because then one understood. At the close of the term Mr. Gilbert went back to Vermont and joined the Union Army.

With the coming of war, we had no more school and the mothers of the community tried to instruct their children as best they could. At the close of the war I attended school for a short time near Coffeeville, Mississippi. Mr. Miller, the teacher, instructed a large crowd of men, women and children and in pleasant weather recitations were held in the open under large shade trees. The last two months I heard classes for him and assisted in teaching.

As a boy I did a great deal of promiscuous reading. Every family possessed a few books, and I went from house to house borrowing and reading everything each family had. Contents did not matter; fiction whether wild west stories or Dickens, poetry, history, all were devoured with equal fascination.

Grenada was then a small village but it was the trading center of people for miles around. Its name was probably derived from the old Spanish town in "the Last of the Moors." The trip to town could not conveniently be made in a day's travel for many country people and frequently whole families from adjacent communities would stop off at our house to spend the night. On such occasions we utilized the "preacher's house," if available, or provided rooms and food. Our table was a bounteous one in those days.

Public travel was almost entirely done by stage coach. The line ran from Grenada out through Jefferson and on to Carrollton and Lexington. Stations were located several miles apart where the horses could be changed. The first railroad into Grenada was the Mississippi Central, from New Orleans to Jackson, Tennessee, which was built about 1855. The railroad from Grenada to Memphis was built just prior to the War, and the two roads crossed over the Yalobusha River on two separate trestles. Soon they were combined and were known as the Miss. and Tenn. Railroad. We had telegraph service at the time and the lines ran from tree to tree through boxes.

Spring Hill community provided two churches. The Methodist Church was erected first and later came the Presbyterian, about two miles distant. While our family were Methodists, services were held on alternate Sundays in one of the churches and we attended both, as well as both Sunday Schools. The first Methodist Church building on the site that I remember was a one-room structure although it was the second one constructed. The men and women sat on opposite sides of the building, which was in accordance with the Methodist Discipline of the day. Not until 1870 did the Methodist Church approve family sittings. The darkies sat in the back of the church, with small doors across the aisle separating the two races. After the white people had communion, the negroes went to the communion rail and were served.

Looking back at the church people of the day, in many ways I regard the old Presbyterians as our most intelligent and cultured citizens. I recall that their protracted meetings were generally staid and sober, while the Methodists shouted like the Holy Rollers of today. So many Methodists practiced the doctrine of backsliding, repenting and starting anew.

Regeneration, Conversion, Repentance and Sanctification were the subjects of sermons of the period with our preachers. Oftentimes the preachers made their home with us in the preacher's house and in the evenings they talked and taught as we children sat by in respectful audience. Secession, State's Rights, the Constitution—those were the topics about which the conversation ebbed and flowed in those days. I'm glad to have heard those discussions and conversations as a boy. These days I hear my grandchildren and other young people talking about football games, movies and funny papers. Civilization does not always bring progress.

When I was a little chap, I remember seeing my first fair in Grenada. Living in our community were two young women, famed for their beauty and their ability as horseback riders. I recall they rode in a parade at the fair, sidesaddle fashion, with long flowing skirts covering their ankles. Some of the older ladies criticized the girls for appearing in the parade, calling it fast and practically immoral. I thought those girls were the prettiest things at the fair.

As a child, many of my most pleasant recollections centered around the darkies on the place. I remember a crippled old Uncle Peter, a slave on the adjoining Nason place, and Aunt Eva, who cared for the children, white and black, on our place. When they got married, all the negroes from both places gathered and decorated up the ironing house for the ceremony. The white folks were there too, both Nasons and Dubards. I recall old Aunt Lucy, who used to milk the cows every day over on the slope of the hill. Each morning when she went out to milk she called all the little children about her for morning prayers at the foot of an old oak tree. Beyond this big and broad oak was the cabin of Uncle Ed and Aunt Melinda, where on many nights I listened to most entertaining ghost stories, and afterwards crept into bed shivering with fear.

Before the war there were considerable entertainment among the young people of the community. At some houses they danced, while other homes disapproved. I recall a big storm party, as we called them, at our home. We had killed a beef and had a large crowd present. The early part of the evening Father came in and greeted the guests. He announced that we were in the habit of having evening prayers and had one of the boys read a chapter from the Bible. Following the reading, he wished all present a happy time and departed. Of course, at most places the young folks came as close to dancing as possible, without actually doing it, carrying on with "Old Sister Phoebe," which consisted of a march and song.

In those days I dreamed about what I was going to do. I desired to be a lawyer but felt that a college education was necessary. I read Blackstone's Commentaries and could have lived on the farm, practiced law and made a living. Like so many people, I found life so much more pleasant and comfortable by taking the easiest course and drifting and consequently never attempted the legal profession.

My advice to the young people of today would be: Go to school. Get the best education you can. If you can't ever get the fundamentals, get hold of yourself and you can complete anywhere. I have seen a great many commonplace people in high places; so often the dullards go up and the boys with opportunities go down. Too few of us remember the old adage, which I consider the paramount law: "Unto him that hath shall be given and to him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Unless I use my hand, it will wither away and the same is true of the mind and every bodily organ. Use what you have, otherwise you lose even that.

I sometimes feel that the world is getting too organized against independent thought and investigation. Our legislatures are insisting too much on formal education as a prerequisite to some of the professions. Our schools are insisting on a set curriculum of just certain subjects and some of the best talent in the land is being lost by too much regimentation.

The Civil War broke out when I was a boy. Four companies were organized from Grenada. The first was the Grenada Rifles, Captain Statum commanding. I had a half brother in that Company, Harmon Dubard, then about twenty-two years old, a fine and handsome man. He died in the camp at Corinth, the first casualty from the County. A committee of soldiers came home on the train with his body, and I never hear a train whistling for Grenada that I don't think of that train bringing Harmon home. He was buried in the old cemetery at Spring Hill Church.

About the same time a company was organized in Coffeeville, of which Aldredge was Captain and Walthall first lieutenant. The old Grenada Rifles and the Coffeeville Company were consolidated in the famous 15th Mississippi Regiment with Statum as Colonel and Walthall as Lt. Colonel, and before the war was over both were generals.

The second company organized locally was Stanford's Battery, an artillery unit. My half brother Adam Fletcher was in that company as sergeant and commanded a gun in the battle. Of course during all this period we at home had little to read and knew less about what was going on. Somewhat later the Memphis Commercial Appeal left Memphis when the Federals captured it and came to Grenada. The paper kept ahead of the Union Armies during most of the war. Later the Yankees took Grenada, burned the railroad bridge and the Appeal began its travels again.

The third Company organized in Grenada was Rayburn's Wigfall Guards, under Captain Rayburn, the fourth company was organized in 1863 and was made up largely of boys and some old men. It was first a unit of the state militia under the command of J. E. George and operated in North Mississippi and Tennessee. Reorganized early in 1864, it became a part of the regular Confederate army. I was the youngest boy in the crowd and we participated in various forays around Memphis, Jackson, Tenn., and Corinth. We were a cavalry unit, first Company G, then Company K of the Third Mississippi Regiment, with McGurk as Colonel and Turner Captain of the Company. My brother John T. Dubard was 1st lieutenant and John Griffin was 3rd lieutenant. Each of us furnished his own horse and equipment and we finally surrendered with Gen. Wirt Adams Brigade in 1865 at Greensboro, Alabama.

In that City I had met one of its residents, a Dr. Washington, formerly of Grenada County. John Griffin and I spent the night after the surrender at his home and the next day both of us were down with the measles. After recovering, we came home on the train by way of Jackson and Canton at the expense of the Government.

I got home to find the darkies playing and frolicking. Many of the negroes on our Delta place had left when General Grant's fleet came down the Coldwater and Tallahatchie Rivers to Fort Pemberton, but most of those on the home place in Grenada County (then Yalobusha) were still there. After the war returning farmers generally started using the sharecropping arrangement with their former slaves. My father refused to use the system and hired them by the day. He said he had sunk pretty low, but not low enough to go into partnership with his slaves.

It is an awful thing for a family, community or country to go from wealth to poverty overnight. Our slaves were free, our best people slain on the battlefield, and martial law was the order of the day. The whole situation made for radicalism.

That year we made a little crop but it took it all to pay the negroes. The entire picture of life before the war was changing rapidly. People in the country began to move to town. Honest people began to use the bankruptcy law. People lost their farms, although some managed to save part of their places. The slaves were free and that made the difference between prosperity and the lack of prosperity. People had to mortgage their crops.

which had never been customary. The old ways of banking and doing business generally were radically changed.

Based on my personal experience and recollections, much that was written of the Reconstruction period was untrue. I belonged to the old Ku Klux Klan and all we ever did was to ride out and scare a few negroes. They would crowd up to vote at the polls and voted their way, but under all the conditions they behaved fairly well locally. We had four negroes and one white man on the Board of Supervisors in this County and also had a negro legislator. Federal Troops were stationed in Grenada College for a while. One Pennypacker was in command and one morning several dead troopers were found, murdered during the night.

Of course after the Civil War most people wanted to keep things as much as possible as they had been before. We wanted to have our slaves in everything except name. The preachers of the period used as a frequent text: "Servants be obedient to your Masters" and declared that slavery had been the Lord's method of bringing these people from Africa in order to improve and civilize them.

During the War we had some 200 bales of cotton, then worth 50 cents a pound, stored in a shed at our Gold Fob plantation in what is now Quitman County. General Chalmers of the Union Army had issued orders that all cotton be burned, so we moved and hid our cotton. Later when the Fleet came down en route to Fort Pemberton, it was discovered and carried away. We (Continued on Page 3)

MISSISSIPPI TOWNS DEVISE UNIQUE HOSPITALITY IDEAS

It is a moot question as to who enjoyed the recent observance of "Hospitality Month" more, the tourists or the people of the communities which actively participated.

One fact is evident. Tourists traveling through Mississippi in June cashed in on everything from free steak dinners to luggage. They were kings and queens for a day or more; they were showered with gifts, lemonade, cakes, cookies and a wide assortment of bumper stickers, courtesy cards, tours, and literature.

Communities, on the other hand, not only came up with some original and sound ideas, but in many instances perfected organizations which are expected to continue to function effectively the year-round. Without exception, everyone who participated commented on the fun they'd had and the improved community spirit of cooperation which resulted.

More than 25 communities have reported on their activities to the Mississippi Agricultural and Industrial Board which sponsors the event and which this year will offer $1500 in cash prizes to the community staging the most thorough and effective Community Travel Development program.

The reports in brief are summarized as follows: Both Vicksburg and Columbus established permanent "Hospitality Houses" and prepared appropriate signs which were posted at entrances into the cities to direct motorists to the information and refreshment booths.

In the case of Vicksburg, a total of 60 service stations were encouraged to place welcome signs on their windows, and bridge attendants at the Mississippi River bridge cooperated by handing out literature to out-of-state cars stopping at the toll gate.

Tourists who stopped at the booth were treated to refreshments and given maps, literature and souvenir Confederate money. Columbus has stationed attractively dressed young ladies at points where it's signs are located to help direct visitors to it's booth.

Among the towns which have conducted "Clean-up, Fix-up, Paint-up" campaigns are Vicksburg, Columbus, Senatobia, Pascagoula, Columbia, Winona, Richton, Brandon, Grenada, Okolona, Booneville, Heidelberg, Jackson, and McComb.

However, one of the most effective drives of this type which have been reported to date was the clean-up and beautification program of the Pike County Chamber of Commerce.

By the middle of June Pike County had cleaned up 537 yards, 16 vacant lots, had painted 16 homes and numerous out-buildings; 108 flower gardens were planted, 56 pieces of shrubbery planted, 42 trees set out, 13 dead stumps removed and 165 vegetable gardens planted. Scrap metal was collected as was paper; trash was hauled away and an insect control program inaugurated.

Corinth probably started the observance with the most spectacular event, a 100th birthday program which attracted thousands of visitors.

During June Corinth also has set up booths at all main highway entrances to the city and is treating tourists to an interesting slide lecture entitled "Corinth, Crossroads of the South."

Numerous communities also have taken this occasion to select certain people who stop in their city to be guests for a day, or more.

Sardis, soliciting the aid of Highway Patrol officers, stopped a Chicago honeymoon couple whom they made guests for a day with a holiday at nearby Sardis Lake. The bride was presented with a piece of luggage manufactured by the recently established Sardis Luggage Company.

Other communities which played host to special guests were Amory, McComb, West Point, Pascagoula, Brookhaven, Vicksburg, and Laurel.

Most of the active participants had a booth of some sort at which Numerous Mississippi towns established "Hospitality Booths" during June to welcome out-of-state visitors. Among the more permanent and attractive were those at Columbus, above, and Vicksburg, whose permanent air-conditioned booth was built by a local trailer manufacturer.

tourists were invited to stop for refreshment, information, literature or tours of the city.

These included Booneville, Grenada, West Point, Forest, Baldwin, Brandon, Quitman, Richton, Corinth, Winona, Amory, Tupelo, Columbia, Pascagoula, Moss Point, McComb, Bay St. Louis, Heidelberg, Laurel, and Port Gibson.

Port Gibson's booth, attended by young ladies in old-fashioned costumes, attracted 241 out-of-state cars in the first two-and-a-half days of the month.

Columbia's mayor issued courtesy cards through service stations, hotels, motels and restaurants, which were in the form of an invitation to tourists to take advantage of a tour of the city for which transportation was provided.

Tupelo citizens established booths but went a step further by meeting all incoming planes, trains and buses throughout the month. Winona, for the first time established a booth which displayed its industrial, agricultural and cultural advantages. Winona's slogan was "Hospitality At The Crossroads."

Amory's Frisco Employees Club of 196 members provided special guests entertainment, erected signs entitled "Home of Southern Hospitality," and arranged for ladies of the town to board Kansas City-Florida special trains to dispense refreshments. The couple found on each train who had been married the greatest length of time was remembered with a corsage for the lady.

Quitman had visitors at its booth from 21 states, Sweden and the Panama Canal zone during the first few days it was open. Pictures were taken of each guest and mailed to him at his home address. Special guests selected also were treated to steak dinner, free gasoline and various souvenirs.

Moss Point, which contributed last year's "Miss Hospitality,"

Moss Point called on its home owners to have "open house" during June with a different "Hospitality House" featured throughout the period. Shown here is "Miss Hospitality" of 1953-54, Edna Khayat, right, and the current entree, Violet Cunningham.

Vicksburg directed its visitors to the "Hospitality Center" through signs with arrows on all main routes leading into the city.

took a chapter from the pilgrimages by having a host home opened to visitors during each week day of the observance. The town of Richton stretched "Welcome to Richton" banners across streets, erected a "Hospitality Hut" complete with tables and chairs for the elderly. Souvenir balloons and literature were distributed.

Baldwin in North Mississippi staged one of the most unique and effective promotional ideas to come out of this year's observance. Located on U.S. 45 just east of the site of the Civil War battle of Brice's Crossroads, the town erected a booth calling attention to the historic landmark. And on June 6th a re-enactment of the battle between Confederate and Union troops was staged before several thousand visitors.

Forest and Brandon both set up booths at certain periods during the month, with the former staging its annual "Tea For Tourists." Grenada conducted tours for visitors to nearby Grenada Dam and Reservoir; West Point's Civic Club manned an attractive booth labeled "Point of Opportunity," and took visitors on a guided tour of the City.

Okolona selected the white and colored homes which had above the greatest clean-up and beautification work and presented the winners with awards.

Booneville completed and dedicated a new 16-acre park which was started following that city's selection as the winner of the state's first Community Travel Development contest in 1952.

McComb's Chamber of Commerce employed its 1953 "Miss Hospitality" to help carry out an extensive observance which featured highway signs and large street banners welcoming visitors to McComb. Merchants were encouraged to stage a "Merchant's Hospitality Day" and effective window and interior displays were used to carry out the theme. All tourists who stopped at the hospitality booth were given theater

Miss Melba Davis Is Wed To Mr. Leon A. Rhodes

A wedding of wide spread interest in North Mississippi was solemnized on Saturday evening at 7:30 when Miss Melba Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Eddie Davis became the bride of Mr. Leon Alvin Rhodes of Memphis and Mount Carmel, Ill.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Johnny Dinas of Coffeeville at the home of the bride's parents.

Beautifully arranged jade and emerald foliage was banked to form a background for white princess baskets filled with large white gladioli and mums. These were tied with pink satin bows, and the lighted tapers were pink, arranged in gold hued candelabra. Graceful fern roping and pink satin bows marked the aisle for the bridal couple.

Mrs. S. L. Moorehead, pianist and Mrs. Steve Smith vocalist presented a program of nuptial music.

Sheriff S. L. Davis, brother of the bride gave his sister in marriage.

The bride was radiantly lovely in a white wedding gown, an original by Renee, in crystallin import Venice lace over matching taffeta. The strapless bodice, with insets of pleated lace was completed with satin covering and the cover up spencer fastening in back was cut in one with French push up sleeves. The gored circular ballerina skirt was worn over a tiered petticoat, and she wore matching lace mitts. Her veil, looped in back with shoulder streamers was attached to a half-hat with satin embroidered with seed pearls. She carried a white Bible surmounted by a bouquet of stephanotis, valley lilies and a single white orchid.

Her sister, Miss Orena Davis, was maid of honor, and she wore a ballerina length dress of pink nylon net over taffeta, fashioned with a snug bodice and cover up jacket of pink imported French lace. She carried pink carnations tied with light blue ribbons, all arranged on a fan.

Little Melba Ann Davis, niece of the bride was flower girl. She was lovely in pale pink nylon net over taffeta. Her corsage was of pink carnations and she carried a white basket from which she scattered rose petals.

Hiram Davis, brother of the bride served as best man.

The bride's mother wore a handsome costume dress of Navy blue lace, Navy accessories and white carnation corsage.

After a beautifully planned reception in their honor the couple left for their wedding trip. For travel she wore a Navy and white faille suit with matching accessories and the orchid corsage from her bouquet.

They will reside in Mount Carmel, Ill. where the groom is associated with Cassidy Construction Co. as an engineer.

MRS. C. C. MULLEN HONORS

MISS NANCY NEELY

The lovely country home of Mrs. C. C. Mullen was the setting Wednesday afternoon for a miscellaneous shower—tea honoring Miss Nancy Neely of Holcomb, bride elect of Newton Earl Heath of Greenville, whose wedding will occur July 11th at Sparta Church. Joint hostesses with Mrs. Mullen were Mrs. H. K. McMahon and Mrs. S. L. Moorhead.

A profusion of colorful flowers decorated the spacious reception rooms of the home.

The honoree was charming as she greeted guests wearing a tulle frock of white eyelet embroidery with floral design and a gift corsage of red carnations. Others in the receiving line were Mrs. Mullen, Mrs. L. G. Neely, mother of the honoree; her aunt, Mrs. Bessie Wilsford of Greenwood; and the groom elect's mother, Mrs. Holland Heath of Carrollton.

In the dining room, the refreshment table was draped with an imported Irish linen cloth. In the center was a miniature bride under an arch of greenery.

Mrs. Hugh Neal of Grenada poured punch, with which guests enjoyed party sandwiches, cookies and mints. Mrs. McMahon assisted in serving and Mrs. Moorhead presided at the guest book and in the gift room.

Around forty friends called between the appointed hours of four and six.

So You're Building a Home!
We'll help you

What does a railroad like the Illinois Central have to do with building your home? Look at the list. You'll see that most of the home building items travel a long way to reach you.

Some we haul as raw materials from mines and forests. Others from foreign lands we pick up at docks. Many come from manufacturing plants scattered over the United States.

This is one reason why it's important to you that we haul vast quantities of freight economically and efficiently. Last year we did the job for an average of only 1-1 3/4¢ per ton mile. No other form of transportation hauls so much for so little.

Out of our earnings from this job last year we paid $47 million in taxes—a fair share in your own community—and put another $20 million into the improvement of this railroad. For we are determined to continue bettering our service to you and all the people of Mid-America.
